

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation. They have refused to air ANY newsworthy item that is remotely anti-Bush on the grounds that it would be political favoritism. If they feel they must air this, they should also pre-empt primetime shows to show Fahrenheit 911. Sadly most Americans get their news & information from television. If they aren't shown both sides then that IS favoritism. Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
